An era ended and a new one started for the Detroit Hockey Club last summer when General Manager Jack Adams retired after 35 years of service and Sid Abel replaced him. The old era was marked with ups and downs, but mainly it is to be remembered for its many ups such as 12 league championships, 7 Stanley Cup winners, 20 straight years of qualifying for the playoffs, and many more glorious accomplishments. Jack Adams built hockey in Detroit and Michigan, and he was an outstanding representative and promotor of the game. Speaking for the more than 300 players who have worn the Red Wing sweater, the Detroit press, and the fans, we say to Jack Adams—Mr. Hockey—thanks for a job well done, and to his successor, Sid Abel, we say best of success in the future!

Hockey History—Howe Scores 500th Goal, March 14, 1962

On a thrilling play, Gordie Howe fires the puck past New York Ranger goalie Gump Worsley to record another milestone in his brilliant NHL career—his 500th goal. Howe had 502 goals going into the 1962-63 season which put him only 42 behind Maurice Richard's record of 544.

Holiday Fans Get Rare Treat As Howe Hits On Penalty Shot

On New Year's Eve, 1961, referee Frank Udvari called a penalty shot against Toronto. Sid Abel picked Gordie Howe to take the shot and the Red Wing veteran is shown scoring a beauty goal on Johnny Bower. The rare call was the first at Olympia in nine years. See page 68 for more information on last year's penalty shots.

The Current Season

SIDNEY GERALD (SID) ABEL

Manager - Coach

Born: Melville, Saskatchewan, February 22, 1918.

There was a story in the Red Wing program last year saying that through his lengthy hockey career, Sid Abel had held down practically every job possible. Now, since last April, Abel has added another position to his list—that of general manager. Following Jack Adams in the Red Wing front office is no easy task as Sid well realizes, but he has had little time to worry about it because he's been too busy.

Besides occupying the manager's chair Abel has, of course, retained his coaching position. With the two time-consuming duties he has been kept on the run, visiting farm club cities, running practices, controlling the business side of the hockey club, and doing such things that a combination manager-coach must. Typical of Abel's day at Olympia was one during training camp when he first sent his charges through a two-hour workout on the ice, and then moved upstairs to handle some contract negotiations with players from the Wings and their farms. He has company along the line of being both manager and coach in two other NHL leaders, Punch Imlach of Toronto and New York's Muzz Patrick. This is the fourth season for Imlach in the dual capacity while Patrick joins Abel as a rookie in this role.

If long-time association with the game plays a large part in qualifying a man as a manager, then Abel surely fits the job. He has been on the NHL hockey scene since 1938 when he first slipped on a Red Wing sweater as a skinny, black-haired left wing of 20. He soon caught on with the Wings, playing the left side on the old "Liniment Line" with Eddie Wares and Don Grosso. A few years later, Adams shifted him to center where he developed rapidly, fulfilling the prophecy of scout Goldie Smith who originally sent Abel to Detroit and said at the time that "he will be a great one."

But it really was not until he was installed between Gordie Howe and Ted Lindsay, forming the famous "Production Line," that Sid became the splendid performer he was. He won the most valuable player award and led the league in goals in 1948-49, the first year the famed unit played together. Three years later, with the Stanley Cup again won by Detroit, Abel retired at 34 after a ten-season career for which he is acknowledged as the foremost center in the club's history. Proficient at both left wing and center, he was the first player to earn All-Star recognition at two different positions. As captain of the Red Wings for seven years, he wore the "C" with honor, as a superb leader who could and did inspire his teammates through his all-out, spirited play.

Abel was a natural to go into coaching after retiring. He started with Chicago, directing the Black Hawks for two years while ignoring his retirement long enough to play 42 games. Four years away from the bench but not removed from hockey followed. And, in mid-season 1957-58, he was Adams' choice to take over the Red Wings for an ailing Jimmie Skinner. His foremost success in four complete years as Detroit coach was in the 1960-61 campaign when he led the team to a fourth place finish, eliminated Toronto in a five-game semi-final playoff, and came very close to beating Chicago in the finals.

NORMAN DOUGLAS (DOUG) BARKLEY

Defense

Born: Lethbridge, Alberta, January 6, 1927. Height 6'2". Weight 195 lbs.

Hoped-for solution to most of Detroit's defensive problems of last year rests on the massive shoulders of the Red Wings' new large-size defenseman, Doug Barkley. Detroit was so anxious to obtain the 25-year-old husky last summer that the Wings traded two players to Chicago to get him. Speaking of the deal in training camp at Olympia, Barkley said, "It's the first break I've had in my career and I plan to make good use of it." Doug was referring to the fact that he never had a real shot at the NHL while in the Black Hawk system due to two reasons: an abundance of young defensemen moving up ahead of him, and older more experienced rearguards being obtained by Chicago. Not that he didn't come close, because he did — he was the final cut at the Hawk training camp for the last four years.

After five so-so years in the Chi-town organization divided between the Hawks' Buffalo and Calgary farms, Barkley hit the heights for the first time last year. Showing new-found scoring power, he became an offensive threat as he set a new Western League record for defensemn by scoring no less than 25 goals. His goal output in 1961-62 is all the more astounding when it is noted that he equalled in one year (70 games) his total scoring of the previous five years (303 games). In a terrific year, Doug was voted the top player in the WHL All-Star game, finished second in the most valuable player voting, and was named to the first All-Star team.

Barkley's puck-chasing began in his native Lethbridge. He was coached in junior hockey at Medicine Hat by a one-time Ranger, Alex Kaleta. Going into pro at 19 in Calgary, Doug's first coach was Lee Fogolin, former Detroit defenseman. Other noted rearguards, Frank Eddolls and Gus Kyle, polished his style while coaching him, until under Alf Pike last year he made the record books.

A bachelor, Barkley summers in Calgary where he drives and works on a cement truck. He lifts weights and plays fastball to keep in condition. In Detroit this season, he rooms with another single newcomer, Alex Faulkner.

ALEXANDER PETER (ALEC) DELVECCHIO

Born: Fort William, Ontario, December 4, 1931. Height 6'. Weight 190 lbs.

One of the first decisions Sid Abel made when he moved up to the position of manager-coach was to install Alec Delvecchio as captain of the Red Wings. "He is the type of player who needs a pat on the back more often than a knock, and I think that wearing the "C" might make a better player out of him," Abel explained. Thus, when Delvecchio sat down with Abel to talk contract last summer he received two pleasant surprises: the title of captain and a salary increase. The latter resulted from Delvecchio's fine showing last season when he finished sixth in the league in scoring, bettered his own previous point total and equalled his best assist record.

Delvecchio is a handy man to have around: he can play either center or left wing, is one of the league's finest penalty-killers, and he does a good job as point man on the power play. He is a durable player, too, and going into the 1962-63 season carried a consecutive game streak of 396. He has played all 70 games the last five seasons plus the final 46 games of the 1956-57 schedule.

In a dismal 1961-62 year for Detroit, Delvecchio's performance offered one of the few bright spots. In January, he scored his 200th goal and took his place as only the third Red Wing to do so. He also is number three on the list of all-time leading Detroit Hockey Club point-scorers (he trails Gordie Howe and Ted Lindsay in both departments).

A product of Fort William minor hockey, Alec made a name for himself playing junior in another Ontario city, Oshawa. Coached by the late Larry Aurie, a Red Wing great of three decades ago, Delvecchio ran up such impressive scoring totals that the Wings turned him pro in 1951 even though he had two years of eligibility left. He started the 1951-52 campaign with Detroit's Indianapolis farm but won promotion to the parent club after six games. Only 20 and a third-line center, he helped the Redshirts finish in first place and win the Stanley Cup in a then-unprecedented eight straight games. Since then, he has been on two other Detroit Cup winners.

Delvecchio has been over the 20-goal barrier four times, including last year when he fired home 26 goals. His yearly scoring totals have been consistent enough to put him among the top 20 league leaders in eight of his 11 years. Proof of his capability at either left wing or center is that he has made the All-Star team at both positions, only the second player in league history to accomplish this feat of versatility. Originally a center, he broke in with the Wings at that spot but was shifted to the wing post a few years later.

Presently, he occupies a center spot, but has in recent seasons operated at both positions while filling in where he can do the most good. With Alec Delvecchio, the most good for the Red Wings seems to come every time he's on the ice.

ALEXANDER SELM (ALEX) FAULKNER

Center

Born: Bishop's Falls, Newfoundland, May 21, 1936. Height 5'8". Weight 165 lbs.

The first player from the Canadian province of Newfoundland to become a regular with a National Hockey League team is the proud achievement of Alex Faulkner, the Red Wings' 26-year-old center. But if it wasn't for the Detroit management's smart decision to take him in last summer's draft, Faulkner might have made the grade in a Toronto uniform. However, this is doubtful, because in Alex' own words he "didn't have much future with the Leafs due to their center-ice strength."

Faulkner, a lightly-built blond of Swedish extraction, has only been away from the Maritimes since the middle of the 1960-61 season when he joined Toronto's Rochester Club. King Clancy happened upon him while attending a hockey clinic in St. John's, Newfoundland, where Alex was playing senior hockey. Clancy liked what he saw of the crew-cut, clever skater, and offered him a spot with Rochester. Alex decided to take a chance and see if his many years of local minor hockey had taught him enough to play in the advanced leagues. He had played junior until 18, and then nothing more than home-town senior hockey under his brother as coach for seven seasons. Alex was satisfied and the Maple Leafs were justified when last season he developed into a splendid playmaker as he led Rochester in scoring by adding 19 goals to an outstanding mark of 54 assists.

Toronto didn't want to lose him in the draft anymore than the Leafs wanted to cut him from their squad at the 1961 camp. But he was the final man to leave the Leafs for Rochester and then he was left off the protected list due to a decision to keep younger players on. As a Newfoundlander at the Toronto camp, he attracted much attention back home. And even though he did not make the NHL, his local fans remembered him. An example of the way they did was the 700 telegrams he received when the Leafs brought him up for a game in Montreal. All Newfoundland seemed interested in this year's Detroit camp simply because of Faulkner's presence. A typical letter came from a St. John's TV station which read: "If Alex makes it, all Newfoundland will be cheering for the Red Wings."

Faulkner's forte is his ability to think. An intelligent lad, he has a great sense of anticipation which helps him avoid being hit too often. His playmaking brought him to Detroit where he is happy to be playing in the NHL, his long-time ambition. His size might be small, but his attitude and talents are large. All Detroit should soon be joining Newfoundland in rooting for Alex Faulkner.

VALERE RONALD (VAL) FONTEYNE

Left Wing

Born: Wetaskiwin, Alberta, December 2, 1933. Height 5'9½". Weight 160 lbs.

Short on scoring power but long on skating ability is the apt description of Val Fonteyne, the Red Wings' 28-year-old left wing. Val makes up for his lack of offensive strength with some superb defensive work. On one hand, he has scored only 15 goals in three years in Detroit while on the other, he has developed into a capable penalty killer and a fine defensive forward.

Fonteyne's goal famine in the NHL contrasts with his four years of high scoring while playing for Seattle in the Western League. The little wingman totaled over 100 goals while becoming an All-Star in the WHL. It was his offensive displays in the minors that finally gave him a shot at the Red Wings after several futile training camp trials with them. In the fall of 1959, his contract was bought by Detroit from Seattle.

One of the league's lightweights, Fonteyne is a swift, tireless skater and a hard, honest worker. Surprisingly durable, he has missed only four games in three years. Although listed at 160, Val's weight seldom goes above 155; in fact, he is allowed to skip many practices during the year to preserve his precious pounds. In the NHL, he has been called for only five minor penalties, but this doesn't mean he shies away from the hard-going because this valuable speedster goes full speed all the time.

DID YOU KNOW? That Red Wing players hold the following league records among others—most goals in one game, 6 by Syd Howe; most assists in one game, 7 by Billy Taylor; and most goals in one season (defenseman), 20 by Flash Hollett.

WILLIAM ALEXANDER (BILL) GADSBY

Defense; Assistant Coach

Born: Calgary, Alberta, August 8, 1927. Height 6'. Weight 190 lbs.

In his first year with Detroit last season, ol' pro Bill Gadsby, playing his 16th season, performed yeoman duty with the Red Wings. Gadsby played all 70 games, worked on both the power play and the penalty killing units, and unofficially filled in as goalie in several crises as the league's best "second goaltender." Yet, he still found time to work at the other end of the ice, scoring seven goals and picking up 30 assists. All this for a player who was to be the team's fifth or spare defenseman! Gadsby's increased role demonstrates the pecularities of the 1961-62 season for the Red Wings; in a "negative" year, Gadsby's performance was one of the few positive developments.

Gadsby broke into the NHL the same year as Gordie Howe—they are the oldest players in point of service in the circuit. Bill likes to point out the fact that he outscored Gordie in their rookie year, eight goals to seven. Gadsby through the years has totaled 119 goals with a one-season high of 14. In 16 seasons, a player puts in a lot of ice time and Gadsby's fifth game in 1962-63 will stand as his 1,000th, only Howe has played more. Eight years with Chicago and six with New York preceded Bill's Detroit affiliation. His honors read as follows: six All-Star mentions, three Ranger scoring records, one league mark (46 assists in 1958-59), and three second-place finishes as the NHL's best defenseman (Norris Trophy).

Now 35 and in his 17th NHL campaign, Gadsby has a new position —that of assistant coach, a right-hand-man, along with Howe, to Sid Abel. While helping Abel, Bill should gain experience to aid him in his planned future occupation, coaching in the Red Wing system. Judging by his excellent competitive attitude and fine fighting spirit as a player, he should make an outstanding off-the-ice leader when he decides to retire. But the Red Wings hope that that day is still some years away.

Although Howie Glover has been with the Red Wings two seasons, the 27-year-old right winger has actually had only a year-and-a-half of NHL experience. This is due to the fact that last year he went out of action in January when he suffered a severe knee injury. An operation was needed to correct the trouble. He spent the season's final months recuperating from the surgery and worrying about his hockey future. The recovery period extended into the summer with the result that it wasn's until July the doctors advised him that the knee had responded perfectly and he was fit to play again.

Given a clean bill of health, Glover came into training camp, and worked hard for a berth on this year's team. A return to his rookie year's form would help Detroit greatly. In that season he scored 21 goals and was voted the third best freshman in the league. Last year his assists were the same as in 1960-61 but his goal production fell off sharply to seven, mainly because he played 27 fewer games than the previous year. This was due, of course, to the injury which occurred at Toronto when he was checked by Allan Stanley.

It was Howie's ability to score that first attracted Detroit's attention. Three years back, he tallied 31 times for Buffalo and two years before that, he had picked up a record-setting 38 goals while playing for Winnipeg in his first professional season. At the 1960 league meetings, the Wings made a trade for Glover with his owners, the Chicago Black Hawks. As a Red Wing, he follows his brother, Freddie, who played briefly in Detroit in the early 1950's.

For the second straight season, all 70 games on the Red Wings' schedule are carried in their entirety over Detroit radio station WWJ, 950 on the dial. Veteran hockey commentator Budd Lynch describes the action and color of both the home and away games. The Carling Brewing Company is sponsoring the broadcasts.

PETER JOHN (PETE) GOEGAN

Defense

Born: Fort William, Ontario, March 6, 1935. Height 6'1". Weight 195 lbs.

One of the most unique trades in history—possibly the only one of its kind—brought Pete Goegan back to Detroit on the eve of the 1962-63 season. The deal was the exact reverse of a swap made last February by Jack Adams which saw Goegan go to New York in exchange for Noel Price; this time Pete came and Noel went. The only difference in the two trades was the cash that Detroit sent along with Goegan in the original deal. Thus Sid Abel lost money in the transaction, but he was willing to in order to get big Pete back on his club.

The black-haired, jut-jawed Goegan (pronounced Goy-gun) has undergone a complete reversal of form since he first joined the Wings five years ago. Originally a bash and crash type, Goegan has developed into a more polished worker. Still, he is rough and tough and his aggressiveness cannot be faulted. He goes at it all-out with a desire to learn the finer points of "defensemanship."

Goegan has put in two full years with Detroit plus parts of three others since coming here from Cleveland. Three years ago, he started with Detroit, but was sent to Edmonton where he showed such improvement that he was brought back for the season's final games. 1960-61 saw Pete become a regular defenseman and a member of the power play where his hard shot enabled him to score five goals. Last season, the gruff-spoken rearguard equalled his goal-scoring, but his assists fell off sharply. The Wings went shopping for a promising minor leaguer, had Price recommended highly to them, and made the deal for him. But it didn't work out and now Goegan gets another shot at a regular defense spot.

GORDON (GORDIE) HOWE

Right Wing; Assistant Coach

Born: Floral, Saskatchewan, March 31, 1928. Height 6'. Weight 201 lbs.

"Mr. Wonderful" among the Red Wings is Gordie Howe, the superlative right wing whose name is synonymous with Detroit hockey. In Howe's case, mere words cannot express his astounding abilities—he has to be seen to be believed! There is the Gordie Howe switching hands in mid-stride and shooting left-handed. There is the Gordie Howe dropping back on defense to help protect a slim lead. There is the Gordie Howe taking his regular turn, working on the power play and helping kill off a penalty. There is the Gordie Howe setting up a teammate with a perfect pass. All these Gordie Howes are the same: the one-and-only, never-to-be-equalled, and just short-of-unbelievable No. 9 on the Red Wings. What makes this all-time great hockey player tick? To find out, let's start at the beginning—

Howe was born March 31, 1928 to Katharine and Albert Howe of Floral, Saskatchewan. He was the sixth of nine children, five girls and four boys. Brought up in a poor environment with none of life's little pleasures, it soon became Gordon's sole idea to improve his family's lot when he was able. Extremely well-coordinated, Howe had started skating at four. He progressed so well in hockey that it soon became obvious to him that his future rested in hockey, and that it was as a hockey player he could accomplish his earliest dreams of helping his family.

At 14 he was playing on five local teams and at 15 he was invited to his first NHL try-out camp, New York's at Winnipeg. But he was sent home by the Rangers. Then a Red Wing scout, the late Fred Pickney, who should be in the Detroit Hockey Hall of Fame in gratitude for his discovery, saw Howe playing juvenile hockey in Saskatoon. He was sent to the Detroit training camp in Windsor in 1944 where he came under the practiced eye of Jack Adams who at once knew this shy, muscular youngster was almost too good to be true. Signed by the Red Wings, Howe had to sit out the 1944-45 season as an ineligible transfer from West to East. With no junior hockey experience, he attended Detroit's camp the next fall and made the Wings' Omaha farm club.

Then at 18, suddenly he was a National Leaguer, scoring his first big league goal in his initial game, Oct. 16, 1946. Three years later, Howe blossomed into the amazing and thrilling star that he is. In the 1949-50 season, he gave an idea of his rapid development and an indication of things to come when he equalled in one year his goal output of his first three years in the league. But before he could continue his climb to fame, fate stepped in and nearly forced a budding career to end at age 22. He suffered a severe skull fracture and brain concussion in the first game of the 1950 playoffs, and the hockey world spent the summer wondering if he would ever skate again. Shrugging off the injury as easily as he does opposing defensemen, Howe came back better than ever. Amazingly, he accomplished the following in the four seasons after his near-fatal accident: played all 70 games every year, led the league in scoring every year, led in goals three of the four and in assists in two, and scored a total of 172 goals in those years! Incredible? Yes, but just another brilliant chapter in the Gordie Howe story.

Since this has been going on for the past 16 seasons, Gordie's list of honors, titles and achievements is longer than Olympia's ice surface. On the Detroit team Howe is the acknowledged leader, the strong-man, the "Big Guy." He has achieved heights unapproached by any other Red Wing in the 36-year history of the club. He has led the Wings in goals, assists and points nine times, including last year. In the league, he is holder of records for games played, assists, and points; moreover, he was the first player to pass the 1000 mark in games and also in points. He needs only 43 goals to claim a record in this department. He has paced the league's sharpshooters in scoring a record five times; last year he finished third, the best he's done since he last won the title five years ago. Another five times he's taken the Hart Trophy as most valuable player. His record of durability is truly remarkable: he has missed but 40 games in his career, 20 of them in one of his first seasons, and he has been forced to the sidelines only 18 times in the past 13 years. In 11 of his 16 seasons, he went through the full schedule. An All-Star's All-Star, he has been named to the select squad on 13 occasions, making seven first teams and six seconds.

Gordie Howe the person is tremendously popular in the sports world, with the fans, the press, his teammates and even his opponents (off the ice). He possesses natural humility not always found in an athlete of such stature. He is a quiet, soft-spoken man with a disarming, clever sense of humor. However, he is a proud and dedicated athlete who has risen to his station in life through hard work, personal sacrifice and conscientious effort.

On the home front, Howe has to take a back seat to his two eldest sons in one respect. While Gordie was 18 when he first played at Olympia, eight-year-old Marty and seven-year-old Mark Howe have already made their local hockey debuts. They played in a "squirt" league game last winter and showed promise of following in their father's footsteps. Gordie and his Detroit-born wife, Colleen, have two other children, a daughter, Cathy and another son, Murray. Howe has made his permanent home in suburban Detroit for several years. In business, he is associated with baseball star Al Kaline in the tool and die field and as manufacturers' representatives to the automobile industry.

LAWRENCE JOSEPH (LARRY) JEFFREY

Born: Goderich, Ontario, October 12, 1940. Height 5' 11". Weight 180 lbs.

The Red Wings' choice for rookie of the year in 1962-63 is Larry Jeffrey, a 22-year-old left wing. That this was planned even last year was evident when Jeffrey was called up from Edmonton. The Detroit moguls made sure that the young flanker played less than 20 games, the limit a player can play in one year without losing his rookie status.

Jeffrey prepped for his emergence into the National Hockey League with the Wings' Hamilton farm club, playing three years in the tough Junior "A" Ontario Hockey Association. Past the junior age limit of 20 at the Wings' training camp in 1961, he signed his first professional contract and went West with the Edmonton Flyers. An immediate success in the fast Western League, the hustling firebrand became a 20-goal scorer in his initial try in the pro ranks, even though he played only 48 games.

Early last February, the Wings put out a call for help in the person of Jeffrey. He justified the promotion by scoring a goal in each of his first two NHL games. His first big night came in his tenth big league start when he scored twice in a 3-0 win at Boston. In all, he ran up totals of five goals and three assists in his 18 NHL outings while impressing all observers with his desire and aggressiveness. To put it in the words of Head Scout Jimmie Skinner, "Larry's a throw-back to the old-time hockey player—he wants to play the game. As the old saying goes, 'he came to play'!"

Jeffrey has come a long way to play in the NHL, not distance, but time. But he's one of those people who has been fortunate enough to fulfill his lifelong ambition early. Since he first laced on skates in his native Goderich, Ontario, he had a burning desire to play in the NHL. Through the years, he let nothing interfere with his dream. Hard work and enthusiasm, both on the ice and off, have now allowed him to realize his fondest wishes. A serious athlete, Larry stays in shape all year around, in the summers by working with 100-pound feed bags in a Goderich mill.

EDWARD ABEL (EDDIE) JOYAL

Center

Born: St. Albert, Alberta, May 8, 1940. Height 5' 11". Weight 180 lbs.

On the strength of a 37-goal performance with Edmonton last year, Eddie Joyal was entered into the running for one of the center positions on the Red Wings. Whether or not this is the year for the 22-year-old pivotman to begin to display his talents at Olympia, it shouldn't be too long before he becomes a star. All the evidence points to this: his great two years with the Edmonton Oil Kings and his fine pair of seasons in professional hockey with the Edmonton Flyers. Each year, he demonstrated to all onlookers that he has the ability to be one of the finest centers ever in the Detroit organization.

What makes Joyal stand-out is his capacity to make brilliant plays which make the fans stand up and cheer. Almost every goal he scored last year was a classic. A stick-handling wizard, he has all the moves to get around or through the defense. Coming out of the WHL, it might take him a while to work his magic in the big leagues, but the talent is there and it should soon show up. Tall Eddie stands out while playing in another way, but it is not as noticeable—he wears contact lenses to correct a near-sighted condition.

RED WING PENALTY KILLERS DO JUST THAT FOR 11 CONSECUTIVE GAMES LAST YEAR

During the middle of the 1961-62 season, Detroit's penalty killing combinations ran up a remarkable string of 11 straight games without allowing a goal while the Wings were shorthanded. From Jan. 4 to Jan. 28, no power play goals were scored against Detroit. During this time, the Wings faced Montreal and Toronto three times each, Boston and New York twice apiece, and Chicago once. Credit goes to the penalty killing pairs of Gordie Howe-Alec Delvecchio and Val Fonteyne-Gerry Odrowski plus, of course, the defense corps. The streak was broken Jan. 31 when Chicago clicked on two power play opportunities, both while the Howe-Delvecchio combine was on the ice. The Fonteyne-Odrowski team went two games longer, a total of 13, before having a power play goal scored on them (by Montreal, Feb. 3).

Born: Sydney, Nova Scotia, June 14, 1933. Height 5' 10". Weight 175 lbs.

Mr. On-Again and Off-Again of the Red Wings is Parker MacDonald, the 29-year-old journeyman left wing. This season's start was typical of his past hockey history. Unimpressive in camp, he was seemingly booked for shipment to a minor league team. But Sid Abel tried him on the Wing squad a couple of times and kept him there in hopes that his experience and know-how around the net would enable him to help the 1962-63 edition.

Detroit is MacDonald's third NHL stop, Toronto and New York coming first. The change of teams came about through the draft, the Rangers claiming him from the Leafs, his original club, and Detroit picking him for $20,000 in the 1960 selections. The dark-haired Nova Scotian was a 14-goal man in his first try with the Wings, but then was deemed farm club material last year.

Well-travelled in 1961-62, MacDonald started in Detroit, balked at being sent to Sudbury, went home to Sydney under suspension, agreed to go to Hershey, and spent the rest of the season between the Bears and the Wings. When he did get on the ice for Detroit he picked up five goals. Capable of scoring a lot more than that, Abel plans on using Parker a great deal to help bolster the left side of the Red Wing attack. In fact, during the last part of training season, Abel had him working on the team's number one line with Gordie Howe and Alec Delvecchio. That's a big step for a player who wasn't even considered to be on the team at the start of the camp, but it's just another "on" development in the on and off career of this popular Maritimer.

BRUCE CAMERON MacGREGOR

Right Wing

Born: Edmonton, Alberta, April 26, 1941. Height 5'10", Weight 175 lbs.

Although only 21, Bruce MacGregor has played a full season and part of another with the Red Wings, has seen action in a Stanley Cup playoff series, and has scored the winning goal in a game in the finals. All this experience at an early age befits the youngster who received the highest bonus ever given by the Detroit Hockey Club to a junior player for signing a professional contract.

MacGregor is a product of the Wings' Western farm system in Edmonton. As a center, he played all his youth hockey out there, progressing eventually to the local Oil Kings. Two seasons of preparation as an amateur with the Kings and he was ready to give the pro ranks a try. Offered a pro contract and an accompanying bonus at Detroit's camp in 1960, the 19-year-old MacGregor signed and headed back home to play with the Edmonton Flyers. The Wings' "bonus baby" didn't fail them as he quickly adapted to the WHL, and playing both center and right wing, became a 20-goal man although missing 16 games. He didn't play the full schedule because Detroit called him up to the big leagues in February. Twelve games at the end of the 1960-61 season was his only NHL experience when he took part in the playoffs which produced his first major league goal. It came in the finals against Chicago and stood up as the game-winner. Last year, MacGregor played the full schedule in Detroit, scoring six times in 65 games.

A strong skater with powerful legs for his size, MacGregor, now that he has had his big league baptismal, is hoped to be on the verge of becoming what was predicted of him in his days with the Oil Kings, an outstanding pro star. Bruce has the tools to do it—brains, a hard shot and great spirit. As a newly married man, he has gained maturity, which coupled with his NHL experience, should help him become the next in a long list of successful Red Wings from Edmonton.

Red Wing Goalies Save Face — Wear Masks This Year

Both Terry Sawchuk and Dennis Riggin have added something new to their game equipment for 1962-63—protective facial masks. Opposed to such devices in recent years, Sawchuk is now sold on them. Hhe sports a molded plastic mask made by the "firm" of Wilson and Olesevich, the Red Wings' trainers. Riggin's mask is the bar-type, identical to the one worn by Montreal's Jacques Plante.

JOSEPH RENE MARCEL PRONOVOST

Defense

Born: Lac a la Tortue, Quebec, June 15, 1930. Height 6'. Weight 190 lbs.

The City of Detroit was originally settled by the French over 250 years ago. Carrying on the local French tradition is Marcel Pronovost, the 32-year-old Detroit Red Wing defenseman. Rugged of feature and pleasant of voice, this 12-season veteran has all the prerequisites for a Frenchman: a full name of Joseph Rene Marcel, a birthplace of Lac a la Tortue, and a home town of Beauharnois, both in Quebec.

Pronovost has been a part of the Detroit hockey scene since he won a regular defense berth for the 1951-52 campaign. He had split the previous season between the Wings and their Indianapolis farm club. During his time in the NHL, Marcel has shown improvement in not only his hockey, but in his English and his education. In hockey, he has reached the heights by being named to the All-Star team four straight seasons; second team in both 1957-58 and 1958-59, and first team in 1959-60 and 1960-61. On the educational side, he is recognized as the league's top bi-lingual player and has become as well-spoken in English as he is in his native French tongue.

Back in 1945 when Marcel was 15, he was "stolen" out of the Montreal Canadien-dominated province of Quebec by Detroit scout Marcel Cote, who first saw Pronovost playing juvenile hockey in Shawinigan Falls. Taken out of French-flavored Quebec, Pronovost was sent to Windsor where he earned a spot with the Jimmy Skinner-coached Spitfires. Turned pro at 19, Marcel starred for Omaha and was voted "rookie of the year." He joined Detroit during the club's successful 1950 playoffs and had his name inscribed on the Stanley Cup, the first of four times he's been on a Cup-winner.

His play in his younger days was almost reckless: he would get the puck and race down the ice. These daring dashes have taken their toll, even though Marcel is a graceful skater and fine puck carrier. A face full of scars and a nose that has been broken numerous times speak silently of the price paid for his all-out efforts. Pronovost's popularity is evident throughout the league and all of Canada. Even in Montreal, where an opposing player is considered almost a public enemy, Pronovost is well-liked. So much so that several years ago, he was given a "night" at the Forum, an almost unheard-of event for a visiting player. Marcel doesn't admit it but he loves to beat the Canadiens, especially at the Forum with thousands of Frenchmen wondering how it happened that he is playing for Detroit and not Montreal .

Youth is Served as 19 Future Red Wings Turn Pro at Last Two Detroit Training Camps

A total of 19 amateurs signed their first professional contracts at the Red Wings' last two training camps at Olympia. In 1961, 11 youngsters turned pro and this year eight players entered the pro ranks. This is concrete evidence of the recent development of the Detroit farm system under the direction of Head Scout Jimmie Skinner. Last year such players as goalie Carl Wetzel, Larry Jeffrey, Bob Dillabough and John Miszuk were turned pro by Detroit while this fall Ron Harris, Lowell MacDonald and Wayne Muloin were among the boys graduating from junior hockey. Incidentally, Wetzel, a native Detroiter, will be out of action for two years due to his being drafted by the U.S. Army.

Born: Kincardine, Ontario, April 11, 1936. Height 5' 11". Weight 165 lbs.

When and if Dennis Riggin takes his rightful place in the Detroit Red Wing spotlight, it will end 14 years of preparation. This year, the 26-year-old Riggin will be sharing the Detroit goal with Terry Sawchuk as Sid Abel continues the team's two-goalie system.

That Riggin is in hockey today is almost a medical miracle. For he has, twice in the last four seasons, suffered the most serious of eye injuries, detached retinas. Remarkably, he has come through the days, weeks and months of operations, examinations and consultations in perfect shape, and the doctors, even those at the famed Mayo Clinic, say his vision is perfectly normal. The story of the accidents is a long one, but Dennis can remember every detail: after playing only 13 games in 1958-59 with the Edmonton Flyers, he was hit by the left eye by a puck in practice and was through for the year. But he came back and worked the next two seasons with Edmonton, plus nine games with Detroit as a replacement for Sawchuk. Last year started on to be his finest in six seasons with the Flyers; after the first month, he had allowed only 18 goals. But in his tenth game it happened again—a screen shot struck him just below the right eye and 25 stitches were taken to close the cut; however, serious damage to the eye ended 1961-62 for him. Up and around finally in April after five months of care, Riggin was immediately summoned to Detroit where Abel had him checked by doctor after doctor, including the Mayo Clinic staff.

Regardless of the medico's verdicts concerning his playing hockey again, it was strictly Dennis' decision to give it another try. Especially since he felt he had a good chance to make the Wings after so many years of waiting. Riggin actually began planning on wearing the Red Wings' No. 1 sweater when he first came to Detroit's Olympia camp in 1948 when he was only 12! A Kincardine, Ontario, family friend, Lloyd Pollock, now president of the Ontario Hockey Association, brought young Dennis to Olympia for two more years at the request of the Red Wing management. Then, at the age of 15 he made Detroit's Windsor club, the Spitfires, and played two seasons under coach Jimmie Skinner. In 1953 the team moved to Hamilton and Riggin spent three years with the Tiger Cubs. Turned pro at the end of the 1955-56 season at 19, he finished the year with Edmonton. Through his pro career, he has had older, more experienced goalies blocking his way to the NHL. Now, a half-dozen years and two major eye operations later, he is finally in the big time, wearing a Jacques Plante-type facial mask. And he doesn't regret a minute of the past 14 years, the reward of occupying the Red Wings' goal being well worth it.

TOP DETROIT PERFORMERS OF 1961-62

Howe Leads Mates Against Three of Five Opponents

Gordie Howe's dominance of the Red Wings last season is shown by the fact that he was the club's top point-scorer against three of its five opponents. Howe scored 23 points against New York, 19 (6 goals, 13 assists) against Boston, and 16 (8 and 8) against Toronto. Norm Ullman paced his teammates versus Montreal with 16 points, 12 of them assists. Alec Delvecchio led the way versus Chicago on 5 goals and 7 assists for 12 points. Howe had 9 goals and 14 assists for his 23 points against the Rangers, all three figures being the team's top individual output of 1961-62.

Notes

TERRANCE GORDON (TERRY) SAWCHUK

Goaltender

Born: Winnipeg, Manitoba, December 28, 1929. Height 5'11". Weight 180 lbs.

Holder of more records and honors than any other goaltender in NHL history is Terry Sawchuk, the Red Wings' 32-year-old, 12-season veteran. The impressive list reads: winner of the Vezina Trophy as leading goalie three times, five-time All-Star team member, shutout leader three seasons and lifetime zero king with a total of 98 going into 1962-63 (88 in season games, 10 in playoffs), only player to be voted top rookie in three different leagues in three straight years, sharer of shutout record in one playoff series, and holder of the remarkable average of less than two goals a game for five consecutive seasons.

For the past two years, Sawchuk has shared Detroit's netminding duties as the Red Wings followed the two-goalie system. This season, his friendly rival is Dennis Riggin. Terry has been back in Detroit five seasons after the big trade with Boston in which he and eight others were involved. Just as Harry Lumley was traded in 1950 to make room for Sawchuk, so Sawchuk was forced to make room for another farm system goalie, Glenn Hall. After one and a half seasons with the Bruins, distinguished only by an illness that almost caused him to give up the game, Terry was brought back to the Redshirts. Before leaving in the 1955 deal, he had established himself as probably the finest netminder in hockey history.

Dean of NHL goalies by virtue of his dozen seasons in the big time, Sawchuk can look back on some shining moments. Such as the 1952 playoffs when he backstopped the Wings to a Cup win in eight straight games by racking up four shutouts and allowing only five goals. A tough, battle-hardened warrior, "Uke" would like just one more taste of glory before he takes off his gear (which includes a mask this year) for the final time.

FLOYD RONALD SMITH

Right Wing

Born: Perth, Ontario, May 14, 1935. Height 5'9". Weight 160 lbs.

A $20,000 addition to the Red Wings this season is 27-year-old right wing Floyd Smith. Sid Abel and his executives picked Smith off the New York "tree" last summer in the league draft. He had been playing with the Rangers' Springfield farm for five seasons. Last year, the hard-shooting Smith experienced his best goal-scoring campaign and it was his league-leading 41 tallies that attracted Detroit's attention. His performance in 1961-62 earned him second team All-Star honors in the American League.

Smith is not new to the National League, however, as he has a record of 55 NHL games behind him, spread over parts of three seasons. He played three games with Boston eight years ago when he was turned pro by the Bruins. Two seasons with Boston's Hershey team plus 23 games with the B's followed before Smith changed his affiliation and became part of the New York organization. Curiously, Terry Sawchuk caused the shift. The veteran goalie departed due to illness from the Bruins during the '56-57 season. Smith, Terry's Boston rommate, was sent the next year to Springfield, a Ranger affiliate, as payment for Don Simmons, Sawchuk's successor in the Boston nets. Five years with Eddie Shore's Indians followed. The only taste of big league action the dark-haired winger had during that time was in the 1960-61 season when he joined New York for 29 games.

Now, the third phase of Smith's NHL career is started with the hope that he and the Red Wings might be able to assist each other—Smith by proving he can play the big league brand of hockey and the Wings by giving him a good shot at it. He's happy to be with Detroit, although the draft was a surprise because he thought he was going to Toronto as part of another deal. Detroit is happy, too, especially if he can work his wing both ways as effectively as his new bosses think he can.

VICTOR JOHN (VIC) STASIUK

Born: Lethbridge, Alberta, May 23, 1929. Height 6'1", Weight 190 lbs.

Aware that many eager young products of Detroit's successful farm system would be around looking for berths on the 1962-63 Red Wings, Vic Stasiuk arrived at last fall's training camp with a "lean and hungry look," according to manager-coach Sid Abel. The way "Stash" conducted himself while securing his position on the team belied his 33 years of age and 12 years of NHL experience. Abel termed him one of the hardest workers at the camp. He was glad to see it because the veteran wingman can do a capable, big league job for his club.

This is the popular Stasiuk's second full year in Detroit since he returned to his former team after five and a half seasons with Boston. All he's accomplished in the 82 games he's playe das a second-time Red Wing is score 25 goals, ten after the trade in January 1961 and 15 last year. He would have increased his total last season but for torn knee ligaments which kept him out of 11 games. As it was, the hustling flanker finished fourth in team scoring, ranking behind the "big three" of Howe, Delvecchio and Ullman.

Stasiuk started his pro career at 20 with Chicago in 1949-50. During the next season, he was obtained by Detroit in a four-player trade. For the following four seasons, he was shuttled between the Wings and their farm clubs, getting into a total of 162 NHL games. Then, he was one-ninth of the big 1955 deal between Detroit and Boston. With the Bruins, Vic played regularly and became a star, surpassing the 20-goal mark four consecutive years. Boston's new youth movement two years ago made him expendable and once again he moved, this time back to the Wings. United with Gordie Howe and Alec Delvecchio, Stasiuk scored twice as many goals in half as many games as he had with the B's. But knee miseries hampered him in the playoffs. This year with his knee trouble hopefully behind

NORMAN VICTOR ALEXANDER (NORM) ULLMAN

Center

Born: Provost, Aberta, December 26, 1935. Height 5'10". Weight 185 lbs.

In Norm Ullman's case, the term "young veteran" is not a contradiction. Instead, it is an accurate description because Ullman, 26, is in his eighth year in the National Hockey League. Ever since the chunky Westerner skated into a Red Wing sweater at 19, he's been destined for stardom in hockey's big league. The road leading to the N.H.L. was a glorious one for him in his final two years of minor hockey. His last year of junior (1953-54) saw his team, the Edmonton Oil Kings, win the Junior "A" title of Western Canada and advance to the Memorial Cup finals. And in his first season of pro hockey the next year, his team, the Edmonton Flyers, won the season and playoff championships of the Western League.

Upon moving up to the Red Wings for the 1955-56 season, Ullman spent a couple of average seasons of transition. He first blossomed out in 1957-58 when he hit the charmed 20-goal circle with 23 tallies. Last year's 26 goals gave him a mark of five consecutive 20-goal-plus seasons. His point totals have been growing at jet-speed rate with the result that he has zoomed into seventh on the list of all-time Red Wing scorers. Another performance this year like the one he had last year (64 points) will tie him for sixth spot with former Detroit great Syd Howe.

Ullman is one of those remarkably quiet but tremendously capable athletes who simply does his job in a steady efficient way. Norm is a tireless skater whose chief fault may be that he never wants to come off the ice. A clever defensive player, he is a master at stealing pucks and a game seldom goes by that he does not intercept a pass or steal the puck and go in for a clear shot. His durability is shown by the fact that he has missed only 12 games in his entire NHL career and has put in complete seasons the past three years. Even a severe knee injury that required a temporary, removable cast a few years back failed to sideline him; he merely hobbled to the rink on crutches, took off the cast, played the game, restored the cast and hobbled out again. A true competitor is Norm Ullman, one of the brightest stars in the Red Wing galaxy.

HOWARD JOHN EDWARD (HOWIE) YOUNG

Defense

Born: Toronto, Ontario, August 2, 1937. Height 5' 11". Weight 190 lbs.

Two seasons back, Howie Young played the final half of the schedule with Detroit. Last year, he spent the first half of the season as a Red Wing. This season, Sid Abel hopes that the volatile 25-year-old defenseman is able to put the two halves together and play the entire year on the Detroit blue line. A rough and ready rearguard, Young has the ability to help Detroit's defensive corps and also to instill some fire into the team. He's proved that he can do this. In the 1960-61 season, his fiery, aggressive play led the Redshirts to the Stanley Cup finals. And last year he contributed greatly to Edmonton's championship team after being farmed out in January.

Young has all the physical equipment to make it big in the National Hockey League. A splendid skater with superb coordination, Young can handle the puck superbly and shoot like a cannon. It is his all-out competitive spirit that alternately is good and bad for him — good in that it makes him a die-hard fighter for his side, but bad in that it causes him to lose control and get involved in hassles which in the past have resulted in hours of penalties and days of suspensions. It is also his electrifying manner of playing the game that has made him the fans' favorite.

Young became Detroit property two summers ago when the Wings traded three players to obtain his contract. He had been briefly connected with the Detroit organization once before when Montreal, his original owner, loaned him to Hamilton in 1955-56. A native of Toronto, he played his junior hockey in Kitchener, where his coach was "Black Jack" Stewart, former all-time great Detroit defenseman whose stiff body-checking style was taught to Young. After a year in the old Quebec League in his first season as a pro, the Canadiens sold him to Toronto. He played with the Leafs' Rochester farm in 1959-60 but was sold to Hershey the next season. He was summoned by the Wings from the Bears in midseason and immediately made his presence known to all — fans, press and opponents. This fall, his fine play in training camp earned him a regular spot on the 1962-63 Detroit defense, and it's a toss-up as to who's happier — Young or the Red Wing management.

DID YOU KNOW . . . That Sid Abel and Alec Delvecchio are the only players in NHL history to win All-Star recognition at two different positions? Abel was the league's second team All-Star pick at left wing in 1941-42. And seven years later, he was elected again—this time as a center on the first team. The present Detroit manager-coach also made the first team at center in 1949-50 and the second team in 1950-51. Delvecchio was chosen as the second team center on the 1952-53 All-Stars. Six seasons later, he was named again to the second team, this time as a left wing.

HOWE ABOUT THIS!

Did you know that Detroit hockey fans have been cheering a Howe on their team for 28 consecutive seasons, going 'way back to 1934? First, it was Syd Howe who became a Red Wing favorite, starting with the 1934-35 season when he joined the team as a result of a trade. He retired in 1946 after 12 brilliant seasons. However, Howe did not drop from the Red Wing line-up because an 18-year-old boy with the same name (no relation) came along the next year and Gordie Howe has been here ever since. Syd Howe is from Ottawa, was a left wing, and wore number 8. He ranks sixth among Detroit's all-time high scorers. Gordie, of course, is from Saskatoon, is a right wing, and wears number 9, although he wore number 17 in his rookie season.

PART THREE — THE PAST SEASONS

THE FIRST DETROIT HOCKEY CLUB — THE 1926-27 DETROIT COUGARS

BACK—Trainer Alec Forbes, Jack Clark, Herb Stuart, Clem Loughlin, Hobie Kitchen, Hallie Halderson, Art Duncan (Manager, Coach and Captain), Frank Frederickson, Fred Gordon, Russ Oatman, Harry Holmes and Eric Brolin.
FRONT—Harry Meeking, Frank Foyston, John Sheppard, Jack Walker and Harold Hart.

History of the Detroit Hockey Club

From a slow and often discouraging start, the Detroit Hockey Club has developed into one of the finest business and sports organizations in this country. Through capable management and intelligent leadership, the Detroit team has become perhaps the strongest of the United States members of the National Hockey League.

FRANK FOYSTON

The City of Detroit was granted a National Hockey League franchise on September 25, 1926. At the time, there existed two local competing factions attempting to gain a club in league. The one that won out was the Detroit Hockey Club, a syndicate of 76 local businessmen, including such prominent names as Fisher, Kern, Ford, Kresge and Scripps.

After winning the franchise, which reportedly cost $100,000, the syndicate merely had to get a team and a building! The first problem was solved when the Western Canada League folded and one of its clubs, the Victoria Cougars, was purchased intact for $25,000 by the syndicate from Frank and Lester Patrick. Among those moving East to Detroit was Frank Foyston, now a NHL Hall of Fame member. The second problem was beginning to be solved as the magnificent edifice called Olympia began to rise from a plot of ground on Grand River Avenue between McGraw and Hooker. Unfortunately, the 1926-27 hockey season came around before Olympia was completed and the first professional hockey team in Detroit was forced to play its games in Windsor. The Cougars' first game was on November 18, 1926, and Boston won, 2-0 — an indication of the dismal things to come because Detroit finished in last place in its initial season.

REG NOBLE

In preparation for 1927-28, Art Duncan was replaced as manager by Jack Adams who showed his spirit by making two trades his first day in office. Olympia had opened its doors to a rodeo on October 15, 1927, and the premiere hockey game at the new stadium was on November 22, 1927. Ottawa spoiled the occasion by winning 2-1. Detroit got into the playoffs for the first time in its third year, but it marked the only taste of success in the first five years. Even a name change from Cougars to Falcons in 1930 failed to help. An early captain of the team was the late Reg Noble.

In 1933 the late James Norris purchased the team from the syndicate. The millionaire Chicago grain broked had always wanted to own a big league hockey team, ever since his amateur playing days in his native Montreal. Mr. Norris brought with him the name "Red Wings" and designed the present team crest, a winged wheel in honor of the club that he had played with back home, the Winged Wheelers. The first year of the new, dynamic ownership, the team hit the top, finishing first and advancing to the playoff finals. Progressing, the Red Wings ruled the hockey world for the first time during the two seasons of 1935-36 and 1936-37 as the Detroiters won the Stanley Cup symbolic of the world's pro hockey championship, both years. Perhaps an inkling of the good things to come was when Mud Bruneteau scored after 116½ minutes of overtime to win the opening game of the 1936 playoffs. That game still ranks as the longest in the history of the National Hockey League.

From the top of the hockey world in 1937 Detroit fell to the bottom in 1938. But it took just two years for Adams to get his team back up; in 1941 Detroit finished third and went on to the finals. They should have won the Cup the next season but instead lost it in almost unbelievable fashion: after winning the first three games of the finals from Toronto, the Maple Leafs turned around and took four straight to win it all. Detroit's turn came the next year, however, as the Wings finished first and won the playoffs for their third Cup victory. Defensive backbone of this team and others during his day was rugged "Black Jack" Stewart.

The late forties saw several memorable items on the local hockey front: Gordie Howe's NHL start (1946), Jack Adams' step-down as coach (1947), and the Red Wings' start of a string of seven consecutive first-place finishes (1948-49). A fourth Stanley Cup came Detroit's way in 1950. The next year saw a Detroit team that was defeated only 13 times and compiled 101 points, both league records. 1951-52 was Detroit's finest team, a team that swept through the playoffs in eight straight games. Cups number six and seven happened fast as Detroit again turned the trick of winning the playoffs two years running, 1953-54 and 1954-55. The Wings have made the Cup finals twice since their last championship with the last being 1961 when Chicago won, 4 games to 2.

JACK STEWART

Three great forward lines are closely tied in with five of the seven Detroit Stanley Cup championships. The unit of Marty Barry, Herbie Lewis and Larry Aurie spearheaded the team to its consecutive wins in the Mid-1930s. Sid Abel played left wing on the "Liniment Line" with Don Grosso and Eddie Wares when the Wings were the winners in 1943. The foremost threesome was the "Production Line" of Ted Lindsay, Abel and Howe, a line which paced the team to two championships during the four years they were together. Names make up the history of the Detroit Hockey Club—names such as, Goodfellow, Sorrell, Liscombe, Carveth, Kelly and Delvecchio A complete and detailed list of all the wearers of the Red Wing uniform is on pages 69-71.

RED WINGS INVOLVED IN FOUR OF TEN CALLS AS PENALTY SHOTS SHOW BIG RETURN LAST SEASON

The Red Wings figured in four of the ten penalty shots called in the National Hockey League in 1961-62. Three of the decisions were in Detroit's favor while one was not. Gordie Howe, Bruce MacGregor and Alex Delvecchio were awarded free shots as was New York's Andy Bathgate. Howe and Bathgate made good on their chances, but MacGregor and Delvecchio failed to score. Howe scored on John Bower of Toronto and Bathgate fooled Detroit's Hank Bassen. MacGregor hit the post on Glenn Hall of Chicago and Delvecchio was stopped by Boston's Bruce Gamble. Howe's penalty shot opportunity, called on New Year's Eve at Olympia, was the first awarded here in ten years and the first called in the league last season while Bathgate's, on March 14 in New York, was the last.

RED WINGS STAGE SUCCESSFUL HOCKEY SCHOOL IN AUGUST

118 eager youngsters, one from West Germany, attended the first annual Detroit Red Wing hockey school last summer at Olympia. Coming from three provinces in Canada, four states and 21 cities in Michigan including 30 boys from Detroit, the students received first-class instruction from Gordie Howe, Alec Delvecchio and Terry Sawchuk. The school was run in two, week-long sessions, the first for kids 12 to 15 and the second for players 16 to 18.
